Corruption in India has increased spectacularly and astronomically during the last thirty years. There is hardly any segment of life where it is not found. It has spread like an epidemic and it is eating into the vitals of the country. According to the Transparency International, India is one of the ten most corrupt counties in the world. The spread of corruption which has dehumanised the whole society and eroded the moral values, is gradually leading the country to degradation, disintegration and demoralisation. It is a matter of great concern to all those Indians who are keen to fight this menace and save the country. Whatever its causes, corruption has serious effects on the system. It breeds injustice and discriminates against the poor, disrupts public services and endangers public health and safety. Moreover, corruption demoralises common men and erodes public trust in government. It also pulls down national image in the international set up. In brief, it sounds a death knell to civil society. 11
